Why appraise ?

Can you really rely on a guess, book value, the word of a non-certified person who may have a "hidden agenda"? The answer is "NO". You cannot. Why not? Relying on such resources is likely inaccurate, may pose a conflict of interest, and may not withstand scrutiny.

Who needs an appraisal ?

- Business Owners need an Appraisal for insurable value, selling, financing, expansion, and strategic growth. Now more than ever banks must have an appraisal in place to lend or to renew lines of credit.
- CPA's need a Certified Appraisal because the IRS requires a Certified Appraisal by a Certified Appraiser! A Certified Appraisal is also needed when helping their clients convert from a C to S Corporation, Estate and Gift Planning, Trusts, Sarbanes-Oxley, and FASB 141/142.
- IRS Requirements/IRS form 8283 -A certified equipment appraisal report conducted by a qualified appraiser is required for IRS form 8283, for gifts of non-cash property in excess of $5,000 according to U.S. Tax code. There can be substantial penalties for donors for substantial and gross valuation misstatements. Utilizing a certified appraisal for those donations ensures adherence to U.S. Tax code.
- Bankers and Lenders need an Appraisal in support of loan and lease decisions to substantiate and collateralize a loan. Especially the Small Business Administration's new SOP's that require a "qualified" equipment appraisal.

- Attorneys need an Appraisal to substantiate accurate and realistic values that withstand IRS and Court for sale, divorce, divestiture, probate, etc.
- Retirement & Estate Planners need an Appraisal to establish value for gifting and inheritance.
